WORLD'S NEED IS NOW POWER

INDIVIDUALS MUST PLAY PART, SAYS R. A. MITCHELL.

BIG THINGS EXPECTED

Should Keep Faith With Ancestors, Dr. C. C. James Says At Bible Class Banquet Last Evening.

"The need of the world today is chiefly for power," the Rev. R. A. Mitchell told the Busy Men's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church at a banquet in the church last night. Mr. Mitchell spoke on "Power and Spirit."

"We are all agreed on the fact that there are many things wrong, that something must be done, and that there is a certain spirit in which to do them, but the things which we agree ought to be done are not done, and the spirit which we agree ought to prevail does not prevail," he said.

"We need someone to give us the power to live as we should. There is no use to urge other people to get at the problems of the day. We should get at them ourselves. To make progress, we should have a fixed principle and follow it out."

The Reverend Mr. Mitchell classed the good things of the world in two groups: the one where it is true that one man has more and consequently another man less, and another set which appeals to the parts of us which distinguish us from animals. This set, he said, is the one where the more one has, the more all have.

The speaker took a rap at "Sunday Christians." "We cannot agree on Sunday that God rules the world and then go out on Monday morning and worship the goddess of glittering gold," he said.

Tells of Old Church.

Following the talk by Mr. Mitchell, John W. Airy, one of the oldest members of the church, told of former days, saying that he was on the official board when the old church was built, and made a comparison of then and now.

Next, Leslie G. Somerville, teacher of the Busy Men's Class, spoke of the future of the group, emphasizing the fact that the great thing of the class was the association it afforded between the men.

C. C. Leeson, superintendent of the Sunday School, spoke briely, urging attendance at the Sunday School services, and saying that the men of the church play a great part in the success of this branch.

Expect Great Things.

The last speaker was Dr. C. C. James, pastor of the Church. "Eyes Looking at Us" was his subject. "All who are behind us are looking at us and expecting us to do great things," he said.

"The man who couldn't have been a hero in the past couldn't be one now. There is something of the heroic for every day and every age.

"The contestant of the morning is the outlook of the afternoon. The man who has played his part has not finished. His task is just beginning for him, for he who comes after him sees him as a hero and a victor and seeks to follow in his footsteps.

Must Keep Faith.

"Frederick William of Prussia said to his son, 'If you lose what I have won, I'll laugh at you from my grave.'" This, Dr. James characterized as being the feeling of the ages. Our forefathers are now looking at us and we should be worthy sons of such sires as have built the Church and the country, he said.

The banquet, which was a chicken-pie affair, was served by the Wesleyan Class of the Methodist Church. Covers were laid for fifty-eight men.

Music during the evening was furnished by an orchestra composed of Miss Ruth Bush, Miss Beatrice Hansen, Donald Goforth, Herbert Hudson, Theodore Breedlove, Lawrence Wray, and Harold Braun.

At the close of the banquet it was decided to make it a monthly affair, on the first Tuesday evening. The next affair will be a rabbit supper.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Behind closed doors the Democrats barred the Republican framers of the new tax reduction bill and began actual construction today of a measure that will cut from 300 to 400 million dollars from the taxpayers' bill.

Excluded from participation of the committee's bill, the Democrats will frame one of their own which they will submit to Congress at the coming session.

A DEMOCRATIC SUIT SETTLED

GEORGE ROBB ELLISON REPRESENTS STATE COMMITTEE.

WILL PAY JUST DEBTS

Party Members Are Ready To Forget Differences And Unite, He Believes.

George Robb Ellison, Maryville attorney who is being urged frequently to become a candidate for judge of the Missouri Supreme Court, returned this morning from Kirksville, where he represented the State Democratic Committee and was successful in securing a favorable settlement of the suit brought by Luther Shepherd of Milan, a former secretary of the committee.

Shepherd, who was secretary during 1919 and 1920, had filed suit for $1,698.62 for expenses he claimed to have incurred during the political campaign of those two years. He also asked interest on that amount for five years, amounting to about $500. After conferring with Mr. Ellison and M. D. Campbell of Kirksville, another member of the state committee, Shepherd agreed to accept $1,598 as a settlement in full, waiving the $500 interest and deducting $100 of his claim as a donation to the party fund.

This leaves the Democratic committee with a clean slate, according to Mr. Ellison, except for the suit of the Con P. Curran Printing Co., of St. Louis.

"The committee will pay its just debts," Mr. Ellison said, "no matter what legal tactics might be used."

Commenting upon the political situation as he found it on his trip into Northeast Missouri, he said, "I find a very noticeable disposition on the part of all Democrats to forget old quarrels and to unite on someone to win."

INVITATIONS MAILED

Maryville-Cameron Game To Start At 2:15 p. m., Assembly At 9 o'clock, Entertainment At 7:30 O'clock.

A peppy alumni assembly in the morning, a whiz-bang football game in the afternoon, and a snappy entertainment in the evening, is going to make Homecoming day at the Maryville High School, on Friday, of this week, one of the great days of this school year. The committee has obtained the most worthwhile and attractive features.

Invitations for the Homecoming have been mailed to all the alumni of M. H. S. that could be found. Many of the alumni have expressed and signifed their intention of being present and pay the school a visit.

There has been some change in the time for the various features, with the exception of the alumni assembly, which begins at 9 o'clock as previously announced. The football game will start at 2:15 o'clock instead of 2:30 o'clock and the evening program announced as beginning at 8 o'clock will start at 7:30 o'clock.

Marvin Epperson, an alumnus of the school, will have charge of the morning assembly. There will be a number of songs, yells, some speaking and the high school orchestra, under the direction of H. E. Hickernell, will supply music. The program is not ready for announcement.

The band will furnish music in the afternoon at the football game.

A number of high class specialties have been arranged in addition to the presentation of two comedy dramas, "The Pot Boiler," by the Dramatics Club, and "An Economical Boomerang," produced by the senior class, will be given at night.

"The Pot Boiler," is a one-act comedy, which deals with Mr. Thomas Pinikles Sud, a very temperamental playwright, who has written a play in which he says he has used all his dramatic principles. He is having a dress rehearsal of this play and at the same time trying to explain his play to Mr. Wouldby the novice.

The cast for the presentation is:

Many circumstances that bring big laughs arise and it is not long until the "money saving" husband finds himself serving as a model.

Mr. Alexander Dabberton—Willis Wamsley.

Mr. Bird Plover—Kenneth Evans.

Mrs. Bird Plover—Virginia Nicholas.

KANSAS CITY KEEPS BEACH

DEMOCRATS, HOWEVER, WILL HAVE CONTROL OF COUNCIL.

WALKER EASY WINNER

Tammany Candidate In New York Piles Up Huge Majority—Indiana Republicans Victorious.

Kansas City, Nov. 4—Despite the fact that Albert I. Beach, Republican endorsed candidate for mayor of Kansas City, under the new charter, was assured of election by a lead of 456 votes with all the precincts complete, Democratic endorsed candidates for the city council had enough majority on incomplete returns to select the city manager.

Five candidates of the nine-member council, backed by Democrats, have fairly safe leads.

Frank C. Niles, chairman of the Ben Jandon Democratic campaign committee indicated a recount would be asked.

Only two of the twenty-five bond proposals carried, according to the returns. These were a $1,200,000 obligation for the improvement of the fire department and a $1,200,000 obligation for city hospitals.

The total bond improvement proposal was for an expenditure of $26,500,000.

Tammany Sweeps New York.

New York, Nov. 4—James J. Walker, "a typical New Yorker, Greenwich Village born, Broadway trained and politically educated by Tammany Hall," has been elected mayor of New York City over Frank D. Waterman, Republican, by a plurality of 401,581 votes, figured on complete returns. Walker carried each of the five boroughs, running especially strong in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Although the Democrats gained four seats in the 1926 state assembly in yesterday's election, the lower house of the legislature will be firmly controlled by the Republicans, according to the latest reports here today.

The next assembly will be composed of ninety-two Republicans and fifty-eight Democrats. The 1925 assembly was made up of ninety-six Republicans and fifty-four Democrats.

Indiana G. O. P. Successful.

Indianapolis, Nov. 4.—The Republican party scored a decisive victory in Indiana in yesterday's voting, according to complete unofficial returns from a majority of the cities today. John Duvall, Republican, was elected mayor by a majority of 8,991 votes.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 4—Complete returns of yesterday's municipal election placed the unofficial majority of Mayor John W. Smith, who was re-elected over Charles Bowles, Klan candidate, at 30,944. Smith, these returns show, received 140,747 votes and Bowles 109,803 votes.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 4.—Except in a few scattered sections, Republican candidates were returned victorious by decisive majorities in yesterday's election in Pennsylvania, reports indicated today. Pittsburgh elected Judge Charles H. Kline Mayor, giving him about 50,000 more votes than his nearest opponent.

A "Clean-Up" in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Nov. 4.—The "clean up" ticket cleaned up in San Francisco's municipal election yesterday, according to tabulations today. The entire anti-administration ticket, supported on the platform of lower taxes, municipal distribution of Hetch Hetchy power and a reorganization of the city hall swept through to an overwhelming victory.

London, Nov. 4.—Labor made a net gain of eighty-seven seats in yesterday's election, virtual complete tabulation of returns show today. Saklatvala, recently barred from admission to the United States, running as a Socialist in St. Francis was defeated by a dead man. His opponent died too late to have his name eliminated from the ballot.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 4.—Commissioner A. Harry Moore of Jersey City, "wet" Democrat, defeated State Senator Arthur Whitney of Mendham, "dry" Republican, for governor in a campaign waged chiefly upon the prohibition issue.

Stewart Appleby, Republican, was elected to Congress from the third New Jersey district, practically complete returns indicate.

As soon as returns assured Moore that his election was certain, he announced that immediately after his inauguration he would start a movement to have congress amend the Volstead act to permit the sale of light wines and beer.

WHEN TO SHOP.

With the busiest season near at hand it will be well for the women to follow the suggestion made by the street railway company to shop "from 10 to 4" and avoid the rush hours.

Not only will this plan cause less of a jam later in the evening, but really a woman shouldn't shop longer than six hours in any one day. If she will shop from 10 to 4 and be quick about deciding upon the things she wants, she can get all her shopping done in plenty of time.

Then there is the husband to consider. If wife shops more than six hours it will begin telling on him. He will have a haggard look, and will become possessed with the fear he will never be able to save anything.

During the next two months many women will be inclined to shop to excess, but each one should make a firm resolution to shop only from 10 to 4 and strive to be satisfied.—Kansas City Journal.

"RESPECTABLE" PEOPLE MUST RESPECT THE LAW.

President Coolidge appeals to religion as the final sanction for obedience to law. That will help, for those who acknowledge religion. The country would be better off if there were more who did so.

But there is no religion in the bootlegging trade, and little enough among the bootleggers' customers. For the bootleggers, the only remedy is fear of the penalties of the law.

For their customers, the appeal must be to religion, for those that have it, and to loyalty to their country and its institutions, for those whose devotions are confined to the mundane sphere. Then there will be a remnant to whom the only appeal is that provided for the bootleggers.

If the "respectable" law violators will once make lawbreaking disreputable, the police can cope with the disreputable ones. — Cape Girardeau Southeast Missourian.

YOUR BILLS AND YOUR CREDIT

Numerous business organizations and credit bureaus are urging prompt payment of bills. The policy of meeting obligations promptly is a good policy, a good habit. It is good business and good ethics. To a large extent it may be self-promoting. The payment of another bill. Such a policy generally applied, leaves little excuse for delay anywhere.

Individual and associated creditors who demand prompt payment of bill's and press those who are willfully delinquent serve not only themselves, but their creditors as well. They help these creditors to establish and maintain good credit records, and such records are important assets. For credit is indispensable in business generally and often a great convenience even when it is not a necessity. But no one can make a bad record without having that fact known through the channels of credit information now reaching from city to city, from state to state. On the other hand, the good record is just as accessible for those who open business negotiations with new customers.

Prompt discharge of matured obligations makes for business safety, for rational economy, for self-esteem and mental composure.—Kansas City Times.

House Committee Is Very Important Now

Many Persons Attend Session Of Tax-Law Framing Body—Pressure For Reduction Terrific.

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer.

Washington—The ways and means committee of the House of Representatives is an extremely important body but usually its deliberations attract little popular attention.

Big business, the industries and banking, always are interested in them, of course. So are politicians, for they know that the legislation which the committee originates will have its reflex later at the polls, favorably for themselves or otherwise.

Most of its sessions, however, are too dry and statistical to have much appeal to the bulk of the people, materially as their pocket-books are bound to be affected, in due season.

Just now is an exception.

The committee's present meeting, to frame a tax bill for the next fiscal year, evidently is being watched by great numbers of voters who never hitherto troubled their heads about such matters—except to kick, subsequently.

This interest is attested by the throng of listeners at each succeeding session, by the delegations of business men who want their views considered and by the stacks of letters the committee members are receiving, containing advice, protests, complaints, warnings and miscellaneous suggestions from constituents and others.

"The fact is," as one committeeman puts it, "the middle class in this country are practically all pinched for money. They get good incomes, but prices are so high that they have to work hard to live inside them. Consequently the pressure for tax reduction is terrific."

Banking Service Costly.

George Woodruff, vice-chairman of the National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, in Nation's Business writes:

It costs money for a bank to handle checks—more money than most people imagine. Consequently unless the average daily balance is sufficiently large to absorb this expense the transaction becomes a drain upon the bank.

Yet, though all bankers realize this fact very fully, many banks in their desire to secure business handle countless small checking accounts at an actual loss. The theory is that such accounts will eventually become large enough to net the bank a profit. But in actual practice the person who maintains a checking account purely as a convenience seldom becomes a substantial depositor.

To meet this situation the banks of many cities now impose a service charge on all checking accounts where the balance is too small to justify handling the account free of charge. In some cities the charge is $1 per month on every account that averages less than $300. In Kansas City the charge is somewhat less, the Clearing House banks making a 50-cent-per-month service charge on accounts that fail to average $100 and against which more than one check per month is issued.

Countless other "abuses"—directly attributable to the intense competition now existing—have crept into the banking business in recent years. There is, for example, the accepting of securities for safe keeping without remuneration, the handling of escrow matters without charge, selling traveler's checks and letters of credit without compensation and dozens of other similar services that deprive a bank of a just profit or the time, labor and effort involved.

Padlocks on Naughty Theaters Suggested

Washington, No. 4.—A movement to padlock New York theaters, which show naughty plays was commenced today by the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

A proposal for revokation of any theatrical license "upon proof that any drama or play, exhibition, show or entertainment, which would tend to corruption of the morals of youth or others has been given or presented in any place licensed," was given wholehearted approval.

"Such action probably will be effective and it probably is the only action, which will accomplish what is wanted," the board said.

Reprinting editorials from two Washington newspapers approving the boards suggestions for reform in the big city, the board commented:

"Sooner or later the American metropolis will deal with this evil. Why not now?"

Around Our Town

The D. A. R.'s had a Pageant of Dress last night at the Empire Theatre. It was appropriately named because it depicted styles when women really dressed. And they say that if you keep a thing long enough it will be in style again. Heaven forbid! The big trouble was that it was quite a task to locate the women, so well were they camouflaged.

After looking over the models, it seems fair to say that in olden times not much of a woman went to waist. In fact, so tightly were they laced in yesteryear that there must not have been much left to hug.

Shades of our grandmothers! Dame Fashion must have been mentally deranged from about 1776 to 1900. It's easy to see why our forefathers were a hardy race. The men had to chop logs and shoot Indians all day, while all the women had to do was carry 100 pounds of bustle and twenty rods of balin' wire under their skirts all day. No wonder they slept well at nights.

And, speaking of balin' wire, wonder just how many afternoon teas grandma missed because dad was playing "roll the hoop" with part of her wearing apparel and her long-handled cane.

Woman's hands didn't have to be small and dainty in those days. The puffs and frills hid 'em from view. Must have been awful hard on Grandad's romance when he reached for Grandma's mit and all he clutched was lace. But then, guess that was all necessary, 'cause anybody's hands get calloused building houses and digging potatoes.

But nobody can say that the women of olden times lacked imagination. They had to have it, or they couldn't have worn the hats they did. Guess that's why there weren't any bobbed heads then. Had to have some protection.

But back to the pageant. Couldn't really enjoy it for thinkin' of my poor grandfather. Bein' married, and knowin' that it's a lie that women don't wear clothes enough, I just couldn't help sheddin' tears at the thought of the awful cost of married life when the Civil War was brewin'. Every married man was a hero then, and a man with daughters was a millionaire or a nervous wreck.

Workmen were busy yesterday and today cleaning off the streets in the business district.

Pair of Aces

Meet Lewis Scott of the Hillcrest Country club, Los Angeles, who recently broke into the spotlight by getting a pair of holes-in-one the same day. For a golfer to get one ace in a lifetime is considered quite a feat. But to smack two in one day is something very much out of the ordinary, indeed.

The Young Fellows Like Our Styles

That's evident more and more each season with increased patronage. They tell us we select the models that are most becoming to them, pick the woolens and patterns they like, and have our clothes tailored with custom care.

And with all these important features we price our Clothes so reasonably low that every Suit and Overcoat in this Store is the value of the season.

Too Much Efficiency

By E. J. (W. J. Watt and Co.) Rath

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN W. BROOKE, widower, hardware magnate, before leaving the city for two months, arranges with a firm of efficiency engineers to take charge of his home while he is away. He fails to say anything about this to his three grown children, Constance, Billy and Alice. But they soon find it out when

H. HEDGE, assigned to the job, takes control of the Brooke household, occupies the owner's suite and turns the library into an office. Hedge is busy in the improvised office while Billy is telling his sisters that the only way to get rid of the "octopus" is to throw him out. Constance is dubious but is willing to be shown. They start for the library.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Billy led the way. In his heart there were no misgivings. The only son of John W. Brooke was not a coward. A certain youthful irresolution may have often dominated him, but there was nothing craven in his nature. He was big and well conditioned. He had played a bit of scrub football, and had taken his hard knocks without showing yellow. The mere prospect of physical combat never dismayed him. Perhaps he was something of a braggart; but that was youth again.

"You've got to get out!"

It seemed inevitable that the efficiency man should be at his desk. He did not even glance up atthe procession, being too busy reviewing buff-colored reports which dealt largely with the perversities of the time-clock.

"We've decided this can't go on," announced Billy abruptly.

Hedge looked up, after he had carefully checked off the report of Giovanni, the furnace man.

"What can't go on?"

"You."

"Oh"

For an instant it seemed that the conversation might terminate at that point. But Billy faltered for only a few seconds.

"You've got to get out," he said, with the necessary glare.

Alice slipped a nervous hand into her sister's.

"What for?" The curiosity in Hedge's voice was unmistakable.

"Because we won't stand for this business any more," answered Billy.

"What business?"

Billy Brooke glowered, which signifies more than mere glaring. The efficiency man did neither. He merely looked and appeared to be interested.

"Oh, there's going to be no argument about it," growled Billy. "Now, you get your hat and beat it. It's all off."

"Too busy," remarked H. Hedge, picking up another report card.

"Going?" demanded Billy.

"Not yet."

"When?"

Constance flinched. She sensed something incongruous in the question. It did not co-ordinate with the great plan. Yet Billy stood firm as a rock, and quite as imposing.

"Not until your father returns," remarked the efficiency man.

Billy coughed noisily and glanced at his sisters. He smiled significantly.

"Give you one minute," he announced.

"And then?"

"Out you go."

"How?"

"Front door."

"Who?"

"Me!"

The admirable brevity of the dialogue was not lost upon H. Hedge, who nodded approvingly as he stood up. There was the utmost friendliness in his eyes. He was not so tall as Billy by something like two inches; nor was he so heavy by a considerable number of pounds. He did not betray any marked evidences of preparedness. Beyond question there was no anger in him.

"Well," he said slowly, "I presume that ends discussion."

"You bet."

The efficiency man sighed.

"All right," he murmured. "Go to it.

Billy advanced a step, then paused. The situation was unfamiliar to him, and somewhat disconcerting. He was not afraid of H. Hedge. If the pair of them had been on the street, or anywhere save under the Brooke rooftree, there would have been no cause for hesitation. But now that he was face to face with physical combat, Billy hesitated.

"Look here," said Billy, "I don't want to muss you up any. You'd better go quietly."

H. Hedge simply shook his head.

"You don't want my sisters to see a fight, do you?"

"No. But we might ask them to retire."

Constance and Alice showed no disposition to quit the library.

"It comes right down to this," blurted Billy angrily. "You put me in a position where I've got to throw you out of the house, and you've got no business to put me there. When you're not wanted, you ought to have decency enough to go."

"I'm not here for my health or amusement," remarked the efficiency man. "I'm here on business. I'm sent here by your father. I'm here till he returns, and by his orders. Naturally, I'm going to stay. While I do not believe in corporal punishment, nevertheless, if you compel me, I—."

He broke off with a shrug and regarded Billy with a calm stare.

"Well," said Billy, taking another step forward, "Lets see who goes out the front door first."

As if to make ready for the exit, there was a tempestuous ringing of the front door bell, which was answered with alacrity by Horace. A sound of voices and laughter echoed from the hall.

Constance laid a restraining hand on Billy's arm.

"S sh!" she whispered. "Company, Maudie Van Nest, I think, and some of the boys and girls. Call it off, Billy."

Billy paused reluctantly. He was eager for the encounter, yet his eagerness was mixed with a feeling of relief that it was not yet necessary to eject a guest from the Brooke mansion.

"You'd better go up and pack your stuff," he advised the efficiency man. "Some friends have come, and that lets you out for a while."

H. Hedge nooded and returned to his desk, where he reached for the day-book and resumed his work.

The Brookes' callers lost no time in taking possession of the house. From his desk, the efficiency man could hear Constance playing a piano across the hall to an accompainment of swiftly moving feet. At times, when the piano was not in action, the phonograph took up the relief work.

It was while the phonograph was playing and Constance was swiftly whirling with the Van Nest boy that the latter asked in a casual tone:

"Who's your friend."

She followed the direction of his glance and saw, at the threshold of the room, the quiet figure of H. Hedge. He was watching her.

Constance missed a step, something that was foreign to her custom, and that did not serve to improve her temper. The Van Nest boy had not recovered from his astonishment at the error when the efficiency man advanced across the room.

"One moment, please," he said.

The dancing couple stopped; so did three other couples, one of which was composed of two girls dancing together.

Hedge included them all in a brief bow, then gave his entire attention to Constance.

"What is the dance?"

Constance, surprised out of speech by the intrusion, turned appealingly to the Van Nest youth.

"Partly a fox," drawled that person, "with a few steps of my own."

"You invented them?" inquired Hedge.

"I guess so. Don't remember exactly; I dance quite a bit."

"It doesn't matter. The point I wish to make is, why do you waste so many steps?"

"Waste 'em?"

Constance's partner was a puzzled young man. "Who ever heard of a wasted dancing step?"

"Exactly. Waste them. I have been watching you dance. You start in a given direction, and you proceed so many steps in a straight line. Very good. Then there is a pause, which for purpose of rest, is undoubtedly permissible. Upon resuming progress, however, you then move in a sidewise direction—four steps—after which you continue the forward motion. You will readily see that those four steps are wholly unnecessary, consume an additional length of time, and bring about a delay in reaching the other end of the room."

Constance was flushing hotly and biting her lower lip. The Van Nest boy was standing with his mouth open. A small circle of curious young people had assembled itself round the trio, studying the efficiency man with wide eyes. Presently Wally Van Nest recovered speech.

"But say," he protested, "those side steps are part of the dance. Don't you understand?"

"Very well. Grant that. But why four? Why not two? You obtain exactly the same effect, that of moving crabwise, with fifty per cent of the effort. I will illustrate. Allow me, Miss Brooke."

And before Constance could move, the efficiency man stepped forward, bowed deferentially, and slipped an arm about her waist. A second later the ring of observers opened for them, and they glided rapidly forward across the floor. With Constance, the maneuver was purely automatic and involuntary. She was in a whirl of rage and confusion, but her feet moved with mechanical obedience to long training. She wanted to stop, but could not.

Eight steps forward they moved, H. Hedge with a mind wholly concentrated upon his work and executing his plans with the precision of a field marshal. They came to a pause.

"To the left, two," he commanded quietly."

THE KEY TO SUCCESS

Success depends primarily on a healthy liver and stomach. You can not think straight if these organs are not working properly. Mayr's Wonderful Remedy is usually successful in such cases. Our advice to everyone troubled in this way, especially when accompanied with bloating in the stomach, is to try this remedy. Young Law Student Aids Colonel Mitchell

William H. Webb Is Probably Most Important In Defense Counsel Besides Representative Reid.

Washington, Nov. 4.—He cannot be seen as he sits hunched beside a big pillar in the court room and as he seldom even whispers his presence is unnoticed by spectators, and yet besides Representative Reid, chief counsel, he is probably the most important personage among the Mitchell warriors at the court martial.

His name is William H. Webb and when Congress is in session he is officially known as the clerk to the committee for the revision of laws. He is the pivot of the defense and it is his nimble fingers that thumbed the thick legal volumes that Reid quotes so glibly.

When Reid was summoned by Mitchell to defend him in the court martial, the representative's first move was to obtain Webb's services. Reid is a member of the committee for the revision of laws and was aware of the young man's ability to gather information.

Webb went to work immediately. He made the Library of Congress his headquarters and his office in the house office building began to resemble a library. Friends say he seldom quit work before midnight and the rapidly mounting piles of notes indicated his industry.

In appearance Webb is a studious youngster with a quick wit and a boyish smile. He has recently finished a law course and will go up for his examinations this winter. He is an ardent admirer of both Mitchell and Reid.

"There are two things in my life that I am proud of," he says, "one is my work on the revision of laws and the other is my participation in the Mitchell court martial."

Farm Economics

A Series of Timely Articles by Staff Members of the Missouri College Of Agriculture.

The Cost of Producing Wheat in Missouri.

Missouri farmers harvested 30,518,000 bushels of wheat this year from 2,312,000 acres. This is an average of 13.2 bushels per acre. A large amount of this crop has been marketed at around $1.40 a bushel, and in general, Missouri farmers feel fairly well satisfied with their wheat crop.

The wisdom of increasing Missouri's wheat acreage for 1926, however, is doubtful, says B. H. Frame, in charge of farm accounting at the Missouri College of Agriculture. Assuming that the demand for wheat remains the same and the weather conditions over the wheat growing areas are normal, an increase in the supply will probably force a drop in the price. Missouri farmers cannot afford to grow wheat for much below this year's price, because this year's wheat crop cost the average Missouri farmer $19.35 per acre or $1.47 per bushel at the farm, according to computations based on the data gathered by the rural life department at the college. The cost per acre was distributed as follows: Man labor $3.00, horse labor $2.90, equipment expense $1.41, seed $1.73, fertilizer $1.76, twine 27c, threshing charge 99c, fuel, sacks and miscellaneous 70c, rent on land (2-5 crop) $6.59.

The foregoing figures are for average yields. Any farmer can cut down the average cost per bushel by increasing his yields. The cost per acre will be increased; but for moderate increases in yields the cost per bushel decreases far faster than the increase in the acre cost.

Ordinarily wheat, with average yields, is not in itself profitable in Missouri. Every year since 1914, the cost of producing the wheat crop of Missouri has exceeded $1.00 a bushel, and in 1921 it was $2.26 per bushel. This, however, does not mean that wheat should be discontinued as a minor crop in Missouri. It frequently happens that the growing of a crop, which in iself is not profitable results in a large farm income. In such cases the profitableness of the single crop should not be considered, but rather the profitableness of the entire rotation. Offsetting the probable loss on the wheat crop might be listed the following advantages in its favor:

1. It affords a chance to rotate the crops. Many experiments have shown conclusively that rotations result in higher yields regardless of the crops in the rotation.

2. It furnishes an excellent nurse crop for grasses and legumes, without which no rotation gives best results.

3. It gives employment to men, horses and equipment without seriously interfering with the production of other common Missouri crops. Even though a man does not receive full pay for his own time, if he has the land available and no other more profitable employment he may increase his yearly income by growing a wheat crop.

4. It increases the diversity of the farm, thereby serving as an insurance against total failure. The more sources of income a farmer has the less chance of total failure from adverse weather conditions or price fluctuations he has.

5. It furnishes a source of cash income at a time when it may be needed. This is sometimes very important.

For the above reasons we should probably continue to grow wheat in Missouri as a minor crop until we find a crop that will fit into our entire farm organization as well and at the same time be more profitable than wheat.

CHURCH NOTES.

The bad weather kept a goodly number away from services Sunday, but there was a very good attendance in spite of the weather. The discussion of the Sunday School lesson was a very interesting one. It touched our modern day life very forcefully. But, I am wondering how good citizens (supposedly) can stand on the streets and give information to bootleggers, even give receipts as to the making of six per cent beer, and still feel they are a good citizen. Let that soak in brother Barnabas.

The Sunday School superintendent announced that next Sunday would be enrollment day, and requests all teachers to make a new roll of their class. Lets you and I be present and have our names enrolled. The Sunday school will observe Promotion and Rally Day next Sunday. A special program will be given Sunday morning, and a special offering taken for education. Everybody come.

The Ladies' Aid met at the church Wednesday. The regular meeting day was changed from Wednesday to Thursday.) The next regular meeting will be Thursday November 12. The following committee were appointed:

They were met at the door by a witch and she led them to the ghost's house, which was a very difficult road to go over. Next the guests were introduced to a ghost, which took them to the fortune teller's booth. The rest of the evening was spent in guessing contests, games of fortunes and music on the radio. Two of the interesting features of the evening was Miss Hooly McGooly Hubbard, the fat lady, whose heart was to be found by the guests when blind-folded. Mary Hicks and Roy Gaddy received the prizes.

Then Dr. Datan was there to prescribe for the love sick couples.

A large black cat kept the guests uneasy by its untimely appearance. The rooms were beautifully decorated in Halloween, jack-o'lanterns, witches, owls and hideous things every where one looked. Refreshments were served consisting of chicken sandwiches, pickles, cookies, doughnuts and bananas. Everyone had a fine time and think Mr. and Mrs. Rowlett are excellent entertainers.

Modern Girl Doesn't Appeal to the Prince

London, Nov. 4.—The modern girl does not appeal to the Prince of Wales. At least, he confided to a Johannesburg, South Africa, society woman on his recent visit there, according to advices today, that he found nothing attractive about the "close-cropped, cigarette-smoking, mannishly dressed girl one frequently sees in all countries."

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Wheat dropped sharply on the Board of Trade today. Corn was strong and higher. Oats finished weak.

Wheat was unsettled. Selling by principal holders kept grain in the pit most of the session. There occurred a few reactions but on bulges renewed profit taking resulted in severe setbacks. Crop complaint from the antipodes were offset by the fact the local prices are now in line with Duluth.

Commission houses were persistent buyers of corn. Sentiment among leading professionals regarding trend of the market seemed to have undertone a change to the bull side.

Oats followed wheat. The pit was all but neglected.

Provisions rested at firm prices. Trade was evenly divided.

School Trains Dogs to Protect Masters

Kansas City, Nov. 4.—Kansas City shepherd dog owners are planning a new weapon against footpads and thugs. A training school for dogs has opened here.

The first lesson for the dog was one on how to protect the master or mistress. Harold Hahn, the head instructor of the school, simulated an assault on the owner of the dog and instructed the dog how to attack the assaulter.

Men in padded suits will continue the instruction of the pets for several weeks. How to disarm a would be stick-up man, how to bring him down from the rear and other things are included in the course, which is only open to shepherd dogs.

INDEPENDENCE.

The ladies of the Independence Inustrial Club will serve the lunch at the Community Sale to be held at the Jess Cox farm 7 miles west of Hopkins November 5, the sale beginning at 12 o'clock.

Do You Enjoy Good Music?

The College believes that there are many in Maryville and Northwest Missouri who do enjoy the best in music. Acting upon this belief, together with a desire that the students be given an opportunity to hear the best, the College has endeavored to bring to Maryville from time to time outstanding artists in their fields.

Thursday night of this week a great musical organization, internationally famous, will appear in concert at the College auditorium. Last week they played in Birmingham, Ala., and here is the comment from the Birmingham Post:

"The Russians who sang last night at Phillips High have left a long-to-be-remembered treat in the memory of a large audience who heard them. Like a summer wind blowing through a cavern, like an organ in a church, like a poem translated into music—it seemed incredible that such things could be done with the human voice.

"Basile Kibalchich, the director, is a true artist, his skill as a weaver of tones is perfect."

This from Baton Rouge, La.:

Last Sunday the choir sang in Baton Rouge, La., and the State Times opened its comment as follows:

"As fine as anything of its kind that has ever come to Baton Rouge," was the comment of many music lovers who gathered at the Community Club Sunday to hear the Russian Symphonic Choir."

Many in Maryville heard them broadcasting from New Orleans last week and are high in their praise of this choral music.

TEAM OFF TO WARRENSBURG

BEARCATS FACE DECIDING GAME THERE FRIDAY.

COUNT ON A VICTORY

Many Rooters Plan To Go From Here In Automobiles To The Game.

The State Teachers College Bearcats will leave on the Burlington train tomorrow afternoon for Warrensburg, where they will meet the Central Missouri Teachers Friday in football. This game will decide the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship if it is won by Maryville, since that would give the locals a percentage which could not be beaten.

At present, Warrensburg and Maryville are tied for the leadership of the conference with a perfect percentage.

The Bearcats have been working all week in an effort to win this game. Warrensburg plays have been used by the reserves, and the Teachers have been perfecting all of their offensive formations.

Today Coach Lawrence was undecided who or how many would make the trip. It is likely that he will take either eighteen or twenty men. He was waiting today to see what this afternoon's practice would hold forth, as he is unable to decide just what substitutes will go with the regulars to Warrensburg.

A number of rooters are planning to make the trip in automobiles if the weather will permit. A large delegation from the boys' pep squad will give a stunt at the game.

In speculating on the game today, Coach Lawrence made the following statement:

"The squad and the coaches realizes that it is going to be a hard game, and yet I firmly believe that we will win it. While the support Maryville has given the team does not justify a championship team, yet, despite this, we will do our level best to gain the thing for which they all cry and which they seem not to be willing to give aid for."

D. A. R. Pageant Well Received Last Nihgt

Audience Seems Pleased With Review of Old Dresses—To Be Repeated Tonight.

A crowded Empire Theatre harkened back to the days of 1776 and then progressed with the fashions to 1925 last night in the D. A. R. Pageantry of Dress, one of the most delightfully interesting attractions of many years. It was a happy crowd which left the theatre at 10 o'clock; a crowd which had been generous in its applause during the program, and which was hearty in its congratulation to D. A. R. women who congregated around the doorway.

To say that any one part of the program was better than the rest would be unfair. Perhaps the most generous applause, however, was accorded Miss Dorothy England, who portrayed the pantalette period of 1835; and Mrs. S. G. Gillam and granddaughter, Virginia Joan Gillam, models of the modern grandmother and child. At no time was the audience more captivated than when the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Gillam, turned and threw a kiss to the crowd.

Mrs. Silas Stanley, as Dame Fashion, and Mrs. Arthur Noid and M. E. Selecman as the original D. A. R. and gallant of '76, were well cast. Mrs. Stanley sedately commanded the persons of all periods, while Mrs. Noid was beautiful in her costume of Revolutionary days, and Mr. Selecman was nothing if not the original prince charming.

Appropriate music for the pageant was furnished by Mrs. Ralph Eversole Mrs. A. F. Harvey, Mrs. L. L. St. Clair and Oliver Bovard.

The pageant went forward without a hitch. Each person was well drilled and the entrances were well timed.

Miss Minnie Evans and Mrs. Joseph Jackson were well received in the tight-fitting gowns and tiny hats of 1886. Miss Mary Lewis, in a gown and hat of 1895, also received an ovation. Miss Edwyna Forsyth was charming in a wedding gown of 1860.

The pageant will be repeated tonight. Preceding it, the picture, "The Boomerang" will be shown.

Much credit is given Mrs. George H. Colbert, regent of the Maryville chapter of the D. A. R., for directing the production. Mrs. Colbert wrote and staged the display. She has directed other productions here and all have been equally successful.

England Will Build Two Big Dirigibles

Great Airships, Twice Shenandoah's Size, to Be Used in Shipping to Far East.

By KEITH JONES

United Press Staff Correspondent).

London, Nov. 4.—Far from being dismayed by the fate of the Shenandoah and the disasters which have fallen its own airships, Great Britain is about to start the construction of two dirigibles each more than twice the size of the Shenandoah.

"England has never lost faith in dirigibles" declared a high official of the British Air Ministry in an exclusive interview with the United Press today. "To prove this statement I will say that designs have been completed and construction is about to be started on two dirigibles each of 5,000,000 cubic feet gas capacity. These are more than twice the size of any dirigible ever heretofore constructed."

These will be known, he said, as the "R-100" and the "R-101." The overall length of the new machines will be 750 feet and the diameter 130 feet. Less than 100 feet longer than the Shenandoah or the R-33, which has recently made test trips over London, the increased gas capacity of the new air liners will be obtained by a marked increase in their diameter.

"Yet despite the increase in the diameter of the new dirigibles" continued the official 'model tests in wind tunnels have shown that the new design actually presents less resistance to the air than the present dirigibles of half their carrying capacity.

"In addition an entirely new type of construction will go into the making of the new airships. Instead of the framework of the dirigible being based on aerodymnathical principles of construction as previously jused the new frameworks will be built on principles followed and developed through long years of steam-ship construction.

"By keeping the length of the machines approximately the same as in the largest of the present dirigibles and getting the increased capacity by increasing the diameter we are able to construct a machine of much greater strength than has been possible in the past."

Neither the Shenandoah nor the R-33—both of which were torn from mooring masts during storms the last year—had been designed with a view to use in connection with mooring masts, he said. But in the new R-100 and R-101 the designers were planning the mooring prows of the airships with special reference to their attachment to mooring masts.

The new dirigibles will have a speed of about 70 miles an hour and will be propelled by seven 600 horsepower engines of the Diesel type, using heavy fuel oil instead of gasoline. The dirigibles will be constructed in the Royal Airship Works at Cardington, England, where workmen are already busy enlarging the present sheds in anticipation of the commencement of work on the new machines.

After extensive tests of the completed airships have been made, said the official, it was the intention of the Air Ministry to lease the ships to a commercial company for use in transporting mails and passengers between London and India. Work on a new mooring mast 195 feet high and embodying new principles of construction is about to be started at Cardington, and a similar one will be erected at Karachi, India, the other terminus of the route.

MOVIES TO BE PUT ON TRIAL

TRADE COMMISSION TO START HEARINGS NOVEMBER 10.

MONOPOLY IS CHARGED

Younger Enterprises Stifled As They Began to Develop, It Is Asserted.

By S. P. HOLLINGSWORTH

(United Press Staff Correspondent).

Washington, No. 4.—The motion picture industry will be placed "on trial" before the Federal Trade Commission this month in a series of hearings due to start November 10.

After four years of investigation, evidence has been collected by commission investigators, which has been held suffieient to proceed against various components of the silent drama business as an illegal business operating in violation of the trade laws.

W. H. Fuller, chief counsel for the commission, has prepared the commission's brief, which reads like a scenario of a mighty business drama, with villains, heros and all the clashings and suspenses of the best movie thrillers.

Thomas Edison, noted inventor, John Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, Colonel Alvin Owsley, former commander of the American Legion, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and other notables inside and outside the "business" pass in review to tell what they think of motion pictures as an influence upon American life.

The "scenario" of the commission swings then to the alleged "villain" of the plot, whose "progressive program" to organize the industry through picture production, distribution and exhibition "destroyed," "wrecked," and "swallowed up" younger enterprises as they came forward.

There was plenty of action as the plot progressed, according to Fuller. There was a new theater added to the chain each day for a year, he said. Dissatisfaction began to breed among the producing artists subjected to "Factory" methods in turning out pictures. But, it was explained, demands for "dividends" sound louder, than the call for "Freedom" from Hollywood.

Careers of two men clashing is latest episode of the drama now unfolding through the final lifting of the curtain by the federal trade commission.

One of them, the "Genius" of the Movie industry, as it has been complained, came to this country a poor boy from Austria to find himself today the controlling factor in the "Art." The other man comes into the picture at the other end of the country, returning after successfully organizing motion picture exhibition in Australia. He is told what has happened while he was away and the battle follows.

The Famous Players-Lasky corporation, around which the story is woven, is expected to contend in answer to the charges of the commission that competition in the motion picture industry is as great as in any other industry.

It has already attempted to show through testimony that many of its enterprises were the natural consequences of trade rivalry with other great distributors and producers.

Fuller contends in his brief that "Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and Famous Players-Lasky corporation have built up and exercise a dominating control over the motion picture industry that has dangerous tendency to give them a complete monolopy therein."
